PIRACY

Over 250 reported attacks since January 2009 have occurred on merchant shipping including 70+ hijackings in the Gulf of Aden and Somali basin; this is still rising. Vessels taken affect loss of hire, corporate reputation as well as crew with some fatalities. Attacks continue in the International Coalition patrolled corridor, off the Somali coast, deep into the Indian Ocean, close to the Oman coast and now in the Red Sea. Methods of attack are continually evolving and are very effective.

SOLUTION

Fox Delta's Maritime Protection Teams have successfully conducted many transits through the Gulf of Aden and the Malacca Straits over the past four years. We understand the pirate's procedures as they evolve and we adapt and change our own strategy accordingly. We have 100% successes in deterring incidents. Our teams comprise of ex-Royal Marines, ex-UK Special Forces, ex-US & European military.

Our experience has proved to be invaluable in reducing the likelihood of an attack as well as mitigating the affects to the vessel and crew if an attack does take place. We carefully advise our clients on the physical preparations of their vessel (prior to entering the red zones), conduct crew training, and liaise with the relevant authorities including coalition warships during the transit.

Once prepared, risk is reduced and our clients' vessels are far less vulnerable. Fox Delta teams have been proven to keep shipping safe in the most dangerous waters. We are here to help you.
